This bill, if enacted, will give the Consumer Advocate Division of the Office of the Attorney General authority to examine books, records, etc. of utilities regulated by the Public Service Commission without obtaining approval from the Public Service Commission. The bill also allows the Consumer Advocate Division to examine utility officers and employees under oath.

The fiscal impact from enactment of this bill is estimated to be an increase in state expenditures to the Consumer Advocate Division of the Attorney General's Office. A reasonable estimate of the increase cannot be determined but is estimated to be not significant.
